

Interview and Biography

1. What is your job?
  - a. I'm a police officer near the city of Houston (Requested city not to be mentioned)
2. How many siblings do you have?
  - a. Three
3. What are your current plans in life?
  - a. I plan to buy a plot of land so I can build my own house
4. What are your hobbies?
  - a. Playing Video Game and fixing up things around the house
5. Was being a police officer the first thing you wanted to do growing up?
  - a. No, I wanted to be a biologist but changed to something more realistic and attainable after high school
6. Where did that front bumper in the house come from?
  - a. One time early on, this guy crashed his car into my car. This fell off and I took it home as a trophy (It was one of his first experiences as a cop)
7. What kind of games do you play?
  - a. Currently Skyrim and Fortnite on occasion
8. What's your current project?
  - a. Setting up a game server and testing to see if friends can join without any problems (Test occurred with no issues last night)
9. I remember that you goofed off in high school and took summer classes at one point. Why did you let that happen?
  - a. I didn't care about school. I got A's my last year and passed so it doesn't matter. Plus some of the people we knew did worse.
10. What do you hate about work?
  - a. The training, though it's not as bad with my newer schedule

About Me:

Jeremy is the middle child among three brothers. If you get to know him, you'll notice his tone of voice is rather monotonic and he tends to say what he thinks. Sometimes this can range from positive or informative things and other times it'll come off as rude. As a young child, he was rather rebellious and tended slack off in school due to a lack of interest. To prove that he was very much capable, he easily scored A's in his last year and passed without issues. However, things improved later on as he took things more seriously.

After high school, he went to college and eventually joined the police academy in order to become a cop. After graduation, he became a cop near the city of Houston where he's worked for 5 years now. Every once in a while he'll regale us with a tale of a rather wild experience that happened at work.

One of his early experiences involved a person who crashed into his car. The front bumper happened to fall off and to this day, he has it hung above the mini-bar inside the house.

As of this current day, he enjoys his job and experimenting with various DIY projects. These can range from setting up a personal server to fixing a hole in the ceiling. He has current plans to one day soon purchase some land and construct a house from scratch so he can have more control surrounding his home. It is here that he would be able work on various hardware projects with his assortment of tools.

Images:

1) Portrait

- a. (This was the best I could get from him because he doesn't want his face shown)

b.

2) Tools

- a. This is the majority of his tool collection he uses to fix various things

b.

3) Computer

- a. This is his personal computer that he uses to browse the web, play games, make tweaks to the personal server, or look up various DIY projects

b.

4) Lego Star Wars Starships

- a. A small hobby of his is to collect Lego Spaceships and Starfighters from the Star Wars universe. This is his largest of the collection so far that was received as a Christmas gift.

b.

5) Bumper

- a. This bumper is the trophy from one of his first calls on the job

b.

6) House

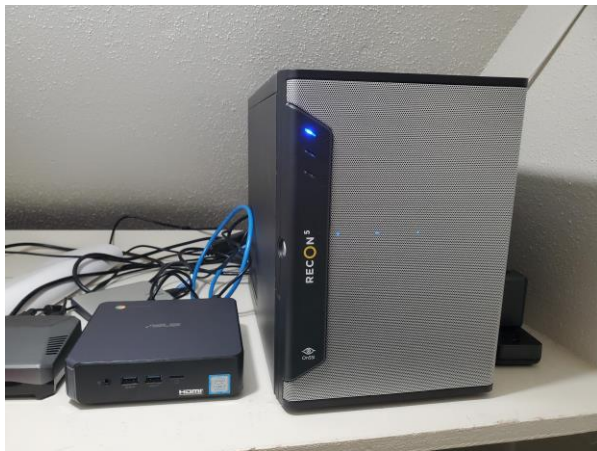

- a. His house that he owns. One day he'll have a new personally constructed house.

b.

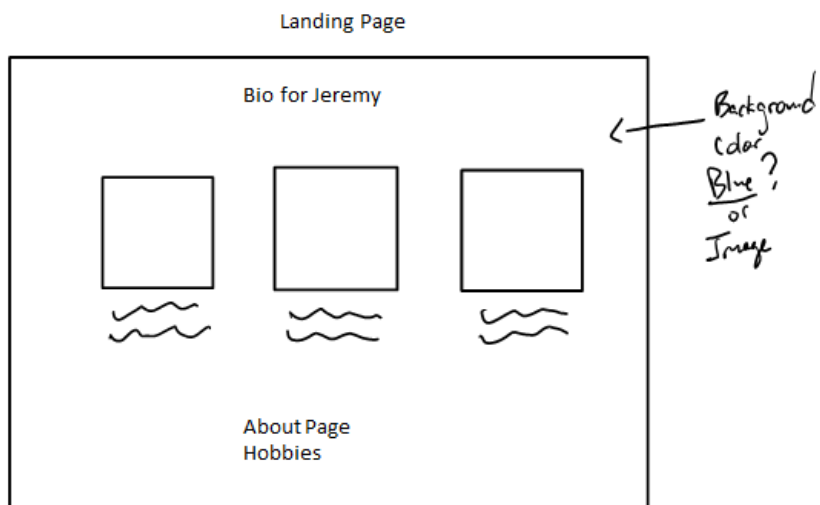

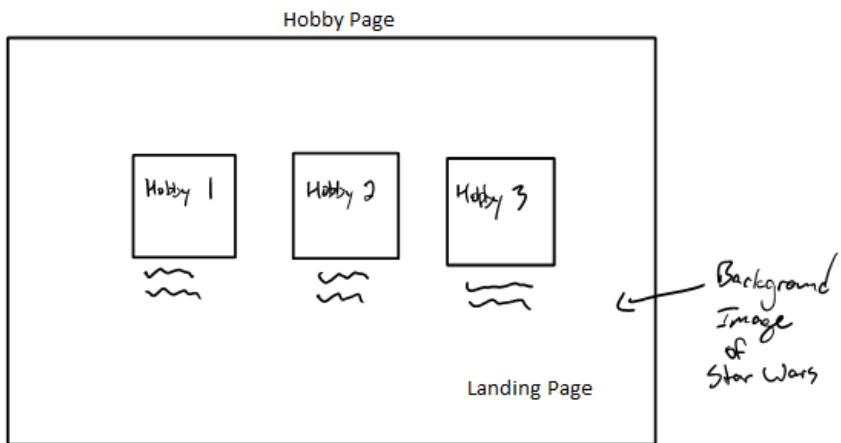

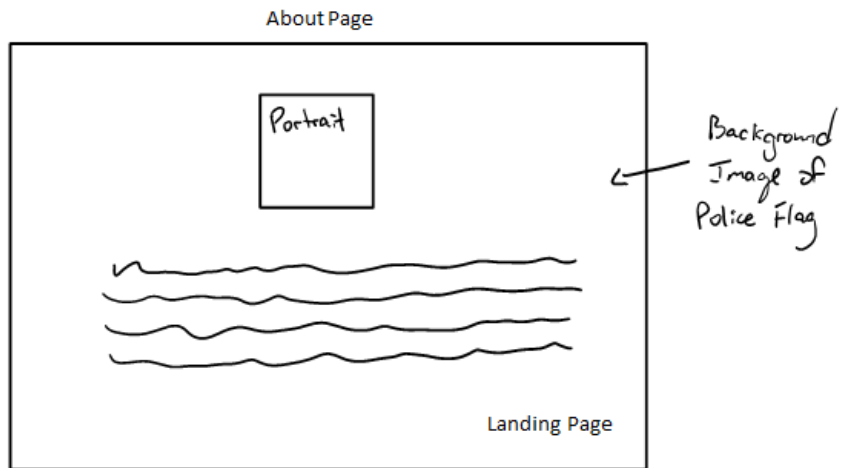

7) Personal Server

- a. This is the second iteration of the personal server in the house. This one is more compact and has significantly more space as well as storage redundancy.

b.

Wireframe:

Front-end Style Guide: Written by hand on top of Wireframe (I hope that's not a problem)

